The Officer who commanded the troops on the occasion reports: 'About an hour later in the day, Dr. Douglas, and Battalion 24th Regiment, and the four privates referred to, gallantly manning the second gig, made their way through the surf almost to the shore, but finding their boat was half-filled with water, they retired. A second attempt made by Dr. Douglas and party proved successful, five of us being safely passed through the surf to the boats outside. A third and last trip got the whole of the party left on shore safe to the boats.' It is stated that Dr. Douglas accomplished these trips through the surf to the shore by no ordinary exertion. He stood in the bows of the boat, and worked her in an intrepid and seamanlike manner, cool to a degree, as if what he was then doing was an ordinary act of everyday life. The four privates behaved in an equally cool and collected manner, rowing through the roughest surf when the slightest hesitation or want of pluck on the part of any one of them would have been attended by the gravest results. It is reported that seventeen officers and men were thus saved from what must otherwise have been a fearful risk, if not certainty of death." Both Captain McRae and Captain Holmes volunteered to go down, but as the former was a light weight it was decided that he should make the trial, Captain Holmes demurring, as he wished to undertake the risk himself. The rope being very weak, it could not possibly have borne Captain Holmes's great weight. Captain McRae was accordingly let down by means of a four-strand tent rope, and on reaching the water found the soldier practically insensible; he therefore decided to go up with him. Captain Holmes was at the head of the rope, and his strength enabled him to lift both completely. <sup>19</sup> Sir James Hills-Johnes served in suppression of the Indian mutiny in 1857-58, including the actions on the 30th and 31st May on the Hindun, battles of Badleeckes-ern and Najufghur, siege and capture of Delhi (severely wounded on 9th July 1857), siege and capture of Lucknow, Rohilund campaign, taking of Bareilly, and action of Mohumdee (several times mentioned in despatches, also by the Governor General in Council, Victoria Cross, Medal with two Clasps, and Brevet of Major): was awarded the VC "for very gallant conduct before Delhi, on the 9th July 1857, in defending the position assigned to him in case of alarm, and for noble behaviour on the part of Major Tombs in twice coming to his Subaltern's rescue, and on each occasion killing his man."—Yesterday, the 9th July 1857, Lieutenant J. Hills was on picket duty, with two guns, at the mound to the right of the camp. About 11 o'clock a.m. there was a rumour that the enemy's cavalry were coming down on his post. Lieutenant Hills proceeded to take up the position assigned in case of alarm, but, before he reached the spot, he saw the enemy close upon his guns before they had time to form up. To enable him to do this he boldly charged, single-handed, the head of the enemy's column, cut down the first man, struck the second, and was then ridden down, horse and all. On getting up and searching for his sword, three more men came at him (two mounted); the first man he wounded with his pistol; he caught the lance of the second in his left hand, and wounded him with his sword; the first man then came on again, and was cut down; the third man (on foot) then came up, and wrenched the sword from Lieutenant Hills, who fell in the straggle, and the enemy was about to cut him down when Major Tombs, who had gone up to visit his two guns, saw what was going on, rushed in and shot the man and saved Lieutenant Hills. By this time the enemy's cavalry had passed by, and Major Tombs and Lieutenant Hills went to look after the wounded men, when one of the enemy passed with Lieutenant Hills' pistol; he first cut at Lieutenant Hills who parried the blow, and then turned on Major Tombs, who received the blow in the same manner. His second attack on the Lieutenant was more successful, as he was cut down with a bad sword-cut on the head, and would have been, no doubt, killed, had not Major Tombs rushed in and put his sword through the man.—"Extract from Despatch of Lt. Colonel M. Mackenzie, Commanding 1st Brigade of Horse Artillery, dated Camp near Delhi, 10th July 1857, and published in the Supplement of the London Gazette of 15th January 1858." Commanded the 8-inch Mortars in the Abyssinian campaign from the 6th Feb. 1868, and was present at the capture of Magdala (mentioned in despatches, Brevet of Lt. Colonel, and Medal).
